Drew Warth assists a wide range of corporate entities and individuals, including hospitals and other healthcare providers, with their litigation needs, as well as with internal investigations and government investigations. His experience is broad and includes defending large healthcare companies and other businesses in False Claims Act cases, as well as working closely with current and former corporate employees under government investigation in a wide range of matters, including in the construction and automotive industries.

Drew's wide ranging civil litigation experience includes e-discovery case management, success at trial, mediation and arbitration, and successfully representing attorneys before the Tennessee Board of Professional Responsibility and Tennessee Board of Law Examiners.

Additionally, Drew assists clients in environmental matters as well, including litigation under the Tennessee UST Act and False Claims Act. Drew has worked on large scale CERCLA matters and represented two major oil companies in litigation related to storage tank and gas leaks.
