Travis Parham is a problem solver. When it comes to commercial disputes, one size does not fit all. Some disputes are best resolved through negotiation and a reasonable give and take. Some disputes can be resolved only in the courtroom. Travis uses his 25 years of commercial litigation experience across a broad variety of industries to assist clients in successfully resolving complex issues in the quickest, most efficient and least costly way possible.

In the course of his career, Travis has handled commercial disputes for a broad variety of clients, including:

- Healthcare companies
- National and regional banks
- Investment banks
- Real estate buyers, sellers and developers
- Local governments
- Waste disposal companies
- Major manufacturers
- Telecommunications companies

Whether a small business or a Fortune 500 company, clients can expect Travis to bring his deep litigation experience and versatility to every matter.

His litigation successes are due in large part to his desire to understand his client's goals at the outset of the dispute and to design the best strategies to achieve those goals. He enjoys learning about each client's particular business as part of developing client-specific dispute resolution strategies. Whether it be an early private resolution or a lengthy public trial, Travis follows the path that best serves the client's strategy. Because of his reputation for aggressive and successful pursuit of client goals, his corporate peers at Waller regularly refer clients to him when disputes arise.
